INVENTIONS AND LITERARY PRODUCTIONS.

Inventor of a plan for the construction of fire-proof buildings, 1870.

Inventor of various surgical instruments, 1868-70. Described in Gross', Erricsson's and Asshurst's Surgeries, and Ziemsen's Cyclopedia of Medicine.

Author of twenty papers on subjects connected with Hygiene, Biology, Speculative Physiology, Social Science, Vital Statistics, and Population, published in various medical and scientific periodicals in this and other countries, from 1868-86. These papers attracted so much notice among literary men in 1873, that voluntary offers were made by editors of scientific journals to pay two and a-half times the usual amount per page for anything he would write. Some were translated and published in other countries. Through these papers their author attracted the notice of your late President, Dr. Barnard, then editor of Johnson's Cyclopedia, who asked for a sketch of his life, which appeared in Vol. IV. of the above publication, and later, with additions, in Appleton's Cyclopedia of American Biography, p. 271, Vol. III., N. Y., 1887.

Membership in various learned and scientific societies followed.

STATUS, TRAVELS AND STUDIES (SINCE 1873).

Was admitted to membership in the Protestant Episcopal Church, by rite of confirmation administered by Bishop Stevens, Philadelphia, 1873. Married daughter of the late William Wetherill, Jan., 1874, who died in Florence, Italy, 1874, leaving an infant daughter, now nearly 14 years of age. Remarried 1887.

The year 1874 was spent in travel in the principal countries in Europe, the winter having been spent in Italy in the study of the methods of the universities of Padova, Pavia, Bolognia, and Pisa.

The disturbance of his domestic life just alluded to, the inheritance of a considerable fortune, and the care of an infant of so tender an age, caused him to relinquish the practise of medicine on his return to America in 1875, since which time his entire life and fortune has been devoted to the study of science, modern languages, and those departments of medicine and its literature which are outlined as subjects to be treated in the proposed BULLETIN.

In 1876 Europe was visited for a second time, and the English universities and preparatory schools were studied.

In 1877-8 two winters were passed in Paris, whither Prof. Janvier had extended an invitation to study Political Economy in the University of France.

In 1880 England and France revisited, her medical schools, libraries and museums visited.

In 1882, England, Holland, Belgium and France were again visited.

1887, England, Holland, Belgium, France and Germany visited. The libraries, museums, universities, and laboratories visited and studied.

1888, England, France and Germany visited. This was a special visit to study the construction and working of the laboratories of Hygiene, Biology, Histology and Bacteriology.

During these fifteen years seven visits have been made to the principal countries of Europe, and the United States have been travelled over from Boston to San Francisco, and from Chicago to New Orleans. In all these travels the chief object was study and the collection of a library, now numbering 8,000 titles.
